Austin Muralists Explore 'Works of Consequence'

Throughout the past year, local Austin artists have also used their work to speak on the political climate, race and world issues, ultimately wanting their art to connect people from all walks of life.

Erwin Center Tips Off Final Basketball Season

You only get one chance at your last first day. For the Frank Erwin Center, that day arrived Nov. 9. After the 2021-22 season ends, the 45-year-old basketball and concert arena will be demolished and replaced by an expansion of the Dell Medical Center.

Insulin Price Caps in Texas Provide Relief While Raising Questions About Costs

Senate Bill 827 went into effect on Sept. 1, placing a limit on co-pays at $25 for each monthly insulin prescription for Texans on government-funded insurance plans. The law prevents diabetic Texans from paying high prices for their insulin, a phenomenon the more than 2 million diabetics in Texas are all too familiar with.

WHAT WE'RE WORKING ON

- I-35 has always been cause for attention, now with recent expansion plans it's garnering even more community opinions.
- As Austin continues to grow in population, we take a look at if emergency medical services can keep up.
